ABOUT

Niphaphone “Laura” Robertson is an empowerment speaker, author, CEO & Founder of Beautiful Potential Consulting, whose work bridges resilience, mental health, identity, and purpose-driven leadership.

Born into a Lao refugee family following the Secret War in Laos, Laura brings visibility to a community often left out of mainstream immigration narratives. While many refugees were resettled in the U.S., few were supported in healing the long-term impacts of war, displacement, poverty, and cultural silence.

Through her speaking and coaching platform, Laura Empowhers, Laura shares both lived experience and professional insight to explore what happens after survival — the generational trauma, identity struggles, mental health challenges, and ongoing deportation issues affecting the Lao community today.

Her talks blend honest storytelling with practical tools, creating powerful conversations around healing, confidence, leadership, and reclaiming voice. Laura is known for creating safe, relatable spaces that allow individuals to move beyond survival mode and into clarity, self-trust, and intentional growth.

Laura works with organizations, schools, nonprofits, and community groups seeking deeper dialogue around resilience, cultural identity, mental health, and leadership. Her mission is to help people live and lead from their beautiful potential — with purpose, confidence, and courage.
